Explore the Art of Painting

This class is perfect for young painters who love to explore. We will use neon and metallic paint to create drip art with squirt bottles on clay flower pots. We'll even paint t-shirts and create 'one-of-a-kind' canvas bags...perfect for your next trip to the grocery store. This class invites students to see their world in a new way—like using a magnifying glass to examine a flower up close...then painting it Big, like the artist Georgia O'Keeffe. Make a painting, then cut it up? Sure! We will create tropical scenes from scraps of painted paper to explore how artists use texture. Make a painting look good enough to eat? We'll use paint that is thick like frosting! Our cupcakes and ice cream cones will stick out from the canvas. We'll explore how to use shading to make painted objects look real. The real lesson in this class? If you use your imagination, the possibilities are endless.

Reader's Theater

Reader's Theater offers an entertaining, engaging, and performance based means of acting, improving fluency and enhancing comprehension. Students will practice reading aloud from a script as a whole class, in pairs, as individual characters, and finally as a group performance. The focus is on reading the text with expressive voices and gestures. No memorization is needed as scripts are held by the readers. Character crowns are designed by the reader and used as costumes in each weekly performance. If you love acting and are searching for a way to make reading fun and joyful (and a bit dramatic), then this is the class for you.
